[Installation / Exhibitions] Energies of Repair	The installation Energies of Repair uses images to explore two movements that define our changing world. The threatening un- livability of the Earth is made visible with scientific data. This is contrasted by con- temporary initiatives that work towards recovery on different levels. On the outside of the installation, visitors experience a world of collapsing biodiversity and climate crisis, resource depletion, environmental injustice, and pollution. The inside shows a world being reconstructed, with activism, relocation, citizen-led collaborations, and low-tech strategies.  The installation is curated by Nicola Delon, an architect and the co-founder of Encore Heureux Architectes, an award-winning firm that among others was commissioned to curate the French Pavilion at the 16th International Venice Biennale of Architecture in 2018, for its "Infinite Places" exhibit. It is an inventory of spaces that embodies the unexpected and a sense of common aspiration. Words and images converse to tell the collapsing worlds and those who are trying to repair themselves. To translate also the trouble along the path where we stand, between political challenges and the intuitions of collective alternatives. The raw material of “The Asymmetry of Blablabla” stems from the exhibition “Energies of Repair”, presented at BaseHall 2 on 2-16 December 2024 in Hong Kong. Organiser: Hong Kong Design Centre Location: Base Hall 2, Jardin House, Central	7/12/2024 Session A: 14:30-15:30 Session B: 17:00-18:00	Free admission

The ultimate in exploration takes us into Orbit, into the far-flung reaches of space. Surrounded by various celestial flora and fauna, our Explorer presides over the glowing path below, as the flow of energy forms an infinite loop, a continuous flow of curiosity, adventure, and discovery. Due to fluctuations in gravity and atmosphere, the life forms in this region of the universe grow large, and alien beings merge with the environment to form lyrical flowers, dreaming mushrooms, and beautiful creatures. The explorers wander through this garden of unearthly delights, drawing wonder, inspiration, and awe from the unknown universe. [Exhibitions] Architectural Elements of a Bygone Aesthetic	Oi Ling Gallery will present three disparate elements of ancient architecture, often the unsung heroes of old design. The first will be a selection of antique carved window panels and screens from houses around the Mainland. Most date from the 17th to 19th century period of the Qing dynasty. Secondly there will be a display of stunning and nostalgic photos taken by local photographer Simpson Wong (author of "The Allure of Old Hong Kong") to document the variety of inlaid tiles and shutters seen in old buildings throughout Hong Kong. Sadly so many of these artefacts are being lost to modernization. And thirdly there will be on display newly-created acrylic/ink paintings of old buildings and street scenes found in Hong Kong and Guangzhou, showing, for example a piece titled "Old vs Modern" juxtaposing the traditional roof top of an old building with a modern concrete housing block. This collection of paintings is from a local Hong Kong artist Aixingero Bill.	2-31/12/2024 10:00-19:00	Free admission

Spaces are built and evolve through accumulation to the needs of different users, resulting in organic stratifications of the built environment. Worn down buildings with clusters of signs, juxtapositions of dissonant colors, neon lights, dripping AC condensers, and exposed piping create an environment in which we can read different layers, historical, urban, functional, and sometimes nature makes its way back and reclaims its rightful share of the city. Through subtle symbolism we pay tribute to Hong Kong's Chinese legacy.
